WHAT JANE'S ADDICTION

SHEER ENERGY

WHAT W'S BEAUTY DIRECTOR, Jane Larkworthy, IS HOOKED ON THIS MONTH.

HOME IMPROVEMENT

*Prettifying in the privacy of your own home just got easier. Makeup legend Vincent Longo and hair guru George Kyriakos have teamed up to launch StyleBookings, an online service offering house calls from top artists and stylists, whose handiwork is viewable on the site (stylebookings.com). I tried it out recently, selecting Stephania Parent because I admired her ability to play up eyes. She didn't disappoint in that department, and she also pulled off some skillful contouring, prompting a friend to ask which derm had done my work.*

OUT OF THE WOODS

I thought I had heard of every botanical beauty ingredient, but the German dermatologist Timm Golueke recently introduced me to another one: Scottish royal fern. The plant is the star of his line, Royal Fern skincare ($195–$295, royalfern.com), which he developed after reading a study about how fern extracts protect cell DNA from UV rays. Golueke mixed the Scottish variety with other ferns, as well as hyaluronic acid and oils of sea buckthorn and wild-rose blossom, to create a protective and calming moisturizer, serum, and eye cream. A sulfate-free cleanser comes out next month.

A BUMPY RIDE

After my torture session on the reformer at her eponymous Manhattan studio, Pilates guru Karen Lord (below) had me use a foam roller on my hamstrings. When she dropped the "c" word, I stopped complaining and said "Hi!" to my new favorite cellulite smoother. "The pressure softens muscle attachments so they can rebuild in a healthier way," explains Lord, who's seen impressive results on clients' thighs. "It also helps rid the body of tension, so it's like giving yourself a deep-tissue massage. You just have to learn to breathe through the pain." Better breathing is another thing Karen and I are working on, so you might say foam-rolling is like killing two birds with one foam. (karenlordpilatesmovement.com)

SILENT PARTNERS

Summer is all about stripping down—when it comes to beauty products, at least. These are so ultralight, you'll barely notice they're there (from left): Nuance Salma Hayek Mamey Fruit Texture Enhancing Finishing Spray ($13, cvs.com); One blast tames my flyaways without even a hint of stiffness or sticky residue. Kiehl's Daily Reviving Concentrate ($46, kiehls.com): Apply this gingerroot, sunflower, and tamanu-oil blend at 9 a.m. and your skin will still look fresh at cocktail hour. Dior One Essential City Defense SPF 50 ($59, dior.com): The main job of this lotion is to protect skin from airborne toxins, but it also works as a primer, imparting a lovely soft-focus effect. Zoya Naked Manicure Perfector ($9, zoya.com): This sheer polish comes in a variety of skin-tone shades, some of which neutralize or brighten discolored nails, so they look simply buffed clean. Smashbox Camera Ready BB Water ($42, smashbox.com): The pigments in this oil-free formula are suspended in water, making for a featherlight base. Onomie Bright Concealing Elixir ($26, onomie.com): A load of botanicals tackles dark circles and puffiness, and mineral pigments give the illusion of slept-well brightness. AmorePacific Sun Protection Mist SPF 30 ($75, us.amorepacific.com): This clear spray looks and feels almost like water, and sinks right in.
