Born out of growing patient needs, dermatologist Dr. Timm Golüeke of Royal Fern has developed a three-part hair growth system that includes a stimulating shampoo, a supplement, and a solution. Available in either a prescribed dosage (available through Skype consultation) or an over-the-counter version, the new system lands this month at Bergdorf Goodman in N.Y.C.

Formulated in Munich, Germany, where Dr. Golüeke is based, the stimulating shampoo is filled with regenerative and nourishing properties such as keratin and antioxidant vitamins C and E, as well as his proprietary Royal Fern Complex. The supplement capsules serve as a hair growth booster, containing taurine, biotin, gelatin, green tea, zinc, calcium, and beta-carotene, which help to strengthen the roots. Then there's the topical stimulating solution, developed as a localized treatment for congenital hair loss. The combination and interaction of hormones, minoxidil, and caffeine reinforce healthy roots for stronger hair growth. All three used in tandem promise to deliver results in three months' time.
